July 10, 2023 – For Public Release

As of July 5, 2023, the latest hydrology report projects a rapid lake level increase over the coming weeks.

It is advised that parked vehicles avoid the shoreline and do not remain parked overnight.

While boating, please use extreme caution as the reservoir may introduce new obstacles and floating debris.

Blue Oaks Launching Facilities

The Blue Oaks Launching Facility will experience a brief closure. The Lower Blue Oaks Launch Ramp is inaccessible at 819'. The Upper Blue Oaks Launch Ramp may become accessible to shallow draft vessels at the 821' elevation.

Moccasin Point Debris Removal

We continue to focus on the safety of the dam, reservoir, and our boaters by containing debris from entering the reservoir from Moccasin Bay and the Tuolumne River Arm. The majority of the reservoir can still be accessed by utilizing the Fleming Meadows or Blue Oaks Boat Launching facilities. We understand and apologize if this may cause an inconvenience to those who need to travel further to access these launching facilities. At this time, we are focused on clearing Moccasin Bay and the Tuolumne River Arm as quickly as possible.

As of July 5, 2023, we estimate there to be 40 acres remaining in the areas of Moccasin Bay and the Tuolumne River Arm. The latest hydrology report projects the lake elevation to reach ~827' by July 20, 2023. During this rapid increase in lake elevation, we anticipate the majority of the debris to begin floating where it can be removed by our contractor.

Fleming Meadows

Fleming Meadows Launch Ramp continues to be accessible without restriction.
